Cinco de Mayo is celebrated in parts of Mexico and the USA too. In Mexico, people hold parades, where they recreate the Battle of Puebla. They also wear traditional costumes or throw parties with their friends and family. At the parties, they dance, play games, and listen to music.

In the USA, Cinco de Mayo is a very big and important celebration. People also hold parades, especially in the areas where most Mexican-Americans live. They watch performers, musicians and dancers, and in the evening, they throw parties and eat traditional Mexican food, such as tacos, enchiladas, etc.
